Relevant Maps

The maps below show likely areas of interest to renewable developers

The map on the left shows where electricity cables will be needed in the run up to 2020 (Note the 2 subsea cables)

The map on the right shows the Crown Estates projections for where the next wave of offshore wind farms will be located (see the red sections). There is also an additional Scottish round out of the scope of this consultation.

The map on the left shows the location of the UK's wave resource with western and southern western areas of greatest likely importance.

The map on the right shows the location of the best tidal stream resource (yellow is the best resource).
